Dealing with Strong-willed Children

For a strong-willed child, a key phrase that will help is "in charge of." Put the strong-willed child "in charge of" of something in your club or class like "in charge" of holding the songs and handing them to you when you are about to sing them. Or "in charge of" taking attendance or even listening to memory verses if you think they are mature enough. This can not only help keep order, but also help the child develop both a leadership and servant attitude.
